

Christopher Pekka Wilde

Ph.D. Linguistics, Helsinki University, Finland 2008

Chris Wilde was engaged in linguistic research in Nepal during 1999-2014, during which time he focussed on Humla Tibetan (Bodish), Rajbanshi (Eastern Indo-Aryan) and Gamale Kham (Central Himalayish). His research interests are Indo-Aryan and Tibeto-Burman phonology and syntax. Further interests are phonetics, field linguistics and orthography development.

Publications:

- Forthcoming. On the origin of Gamale Kham labial-palatal approximants. Linguistics of the Tibeto-Burman Area.
2017. A phonological comparison of Gamale, Sheram and Ghushang - Three Kham varieties. Journal of the Southeast Asian Linguistics Society 10.1:67-90. (Available online)
2016. Gamale Kham phonology revisited, with Devanagari-based orthography and lexicon. Journal of the Southeast Asian Linguistics Society 9:130-199. (Available online)
2011. Observations on the phonology of Gamāle Khām. Himalayan Linguistics 10.1:273-290. (Available online)
2005. Notes on Rajbanshi phonology and orthography development. In Yogendra Yadava, Govinda Bhattarai, Ram Raj Lohani, Balaram Prasain and Krishna Parajuli (eds.) Contemporary Issues in Nepali Linguistics. Kathmandu: Linguistic Society of Nepal, 421-428.

Conference presentations:

2006. Tense neutralisation and discourse cohesion in oral narratives in Far-Western Rājbanṣhi. Paper presented at the 12th Himalayan Languages Symposium / 27th Annual Conference of the Linguistic Society of Nepal, Kathmandu, November 2006.