

Phinnarat Akharawatthanakun

Assistant Professor

Ph.D. Linguistics, Chulalongkorn University, Bangkok, Thailand, 2004
Phinnarat Akharawatthanakun regularly teaches phonological analysis, historical and comparative linguistics, field methods in linguistics, and occasionally lexicography at Payap University since 2006. Her research focuses mainly on the phonetics and phonology of tone, and on phonological and lexical variation and change in Tai languages, especially Lao. In addition to phonetics, phonology, field linguistics, sociolinguistics and dialectology, she is interested in linguistic reconstruction and investigates the historical and comparative aspects of language change, especially the contact-induced external factors.
